The Boston Home Show Has a New Home!

Formerly The Bayside Expo Center, Now MIT's Johnson Center
September 17, 18, 19, 2010

The Boston Home Show, located at the Bayside Expo Center, has been a rich tradition in Boston for over 30 years. For the past 6 years, Pat Hoey Productions has built it to be the largest and most attended home show in New England. It is a well known 3 day event where homeowners can take in ideas, shop for products, and hire services for the improvement of their home. Attendees can comparison shop without any of the pressures or inconveniences of travelling from location to location.

With the University of Massachusetts' acquisition of the Bayside Expo Center, comes a new chapter for The Boston Home Show, including the founding of its new home- MIT's Johnson Center.

The Boston Home Show is excited about the move and will enjoy great advantages for both exhibitors and attendees with this venue. The Johnson Center, located on 120 Vassar St. in Cambridge is 1 mile off Exit 18 on the Mass Turnpike, a 5 minute walk from the Kendall/ MIT Red Line T Stop, and has ample parking in their parking garage across the street for just $5 for attendees.

“This show has been a quality event of ours for 6 years, drawing 32,000 upscale homeowners each year who want to improve their home with our clients. I am excited to open this new chapter and watch as The Boston Home Show continues to grow right in the heart of Cambridge.” Pat Hoey, President of Pat Hoey Productions tells us.

The Boston Home Show has been fortunate to have relationships with sponsors like Comcast, Better Homes & Gardens, Verizon, Kitchen Magic, and Renewal by Andersen, Champion Windows, MBTA, IBEW Local 103, and several other well respected companies. This year The Boston Home Show encourages attendees to check out its new home while meeting with the experts to make their dreams for their home a reality!
